To start, the figures presented in Adults in the Room are staggering; the exposure of European banks in the run up to the crisis is calculated at 30 trillion USD, or trice the income of Germany, France, the Netherlands and the UK combined. Similarly, the impact of Greek austerity measures between 2010 and 2012 is calculated at a 15 percent reduction in government spending, nearly four times that of Spain's in the same period.
