The book is subtitled a first contact technothriller and that's what attracted me to it. I usually like "first contact" stories. What I didn't expect was that the majority of the 400 pages was really about earth's international politics, including the Russians, the Chinese and other nations, all banding together to build something that had never been built before.

First contact in space, on alien planets, through portals, via radio and other signals. There are many changes to ring on that concept. I confess that the idea of a VR pilot making first contact via the waldoes they control is one that I had not thought of, and while, like everything, surely someone has thought of this before, it still is stunningly fresh and interesting.
