Richard Gary Brautigan (January 30, 1935 – ca. September 16, 1984) was an American novelist, poet, and short story writer. He is best known for his novels Trout Fishing in America (1967) and In Watermelon Sugar (1968). Brautigan began his career as a poet, with his first collection being published in 1957.

PAULINE'S SHACK was about a mile from iDEATH. She doesn't spend much time there. It's beyond the town. There are about 375 of us here in watermelon sugar. A lot of people live in the town, but some live in shacks at other places, and there are of course we who live at iDEATH. There were just a few lights on in the town, other than the street lamps. iDEATH is a place where the sun shines a different color every day and where people travel to the length of their dreams. Rejecting the violence and hate of the old gang at the Forgotten Works, they lead gentle lives in watermelon sugar. In this book, Richard Brautigan discovers and expresses the mood of the counter-culture generation.

My favorite Brautigan book is In Watermelon Sugar, but Trout Fishing in America is great too. In Watermelon Sugar has a more linear narrative, while Trout Fishing in America is a bit more circular and broken. This guy drops more character into one sentence than any self-respecting sentence has a right to.
